Detailed Action

1.) The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2.) Claims 1-28 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Terayama et al. (5,220,151) taken with Stava (6,111,216, cited by applicant). Figures 3, 6, and 8 and the discussion thereof, especially at columns 15-17 in the patent to Terayama et al. (5,220,151) disclose an electric arc welder with features claimed, including: a high frequency switching device at "INV1"; a polarity control signal associated with signal "S0" from element 12; a profile control network 801 in figure 6 or 8e in figure 8; and a magnitude circuit associated with element 809 in figure 6. Any regard to the claim allusions to control of profile parameters, note that because the system of figure 8 stores the entire waveform profile, it controls all profile parameters. The claims differ in calling for a high frequency switching device operating at 18 kHz. This difference does not patentably distinguish over the prior art. At the time applicant's invention was made, it would have been obvious to have operated the high frequency inverter in Terayama et al. (5,220,151) at any convenient frequency. In particular, it would have been obvious to have used a frequency of 18 kHz, the motivation being the teachings of Stava (6,111,216) that this frequency is advantageous for an inverter based welding power supply (see the discussion at column 4 of Stava (6,111,216)).
